This paragraph is set with extra letter spacing, the way a designer tracks out a short introduction so that it reads lighter on the page.

This paragraph is condensed by horizontal scaling to ninety per cent and tightened a little, as layout programs do to make a long text fit its frame.

This paragraph is justified by word spacing only: every line but the last carries its own Tw so that it ends exactly at the right edge of the column, the way a print driver sets a justified page.

This last paragraph uses a text leading and moves to the next line with the quote operator, so each line carries no coordinates of its own.